

Thame Community Market – A Day in the Life

On Tuesday 22nd August, Matt Carter and volunteer Dr Ed White set up a joint stall representing OOSO and the newly formed Health Development Trust at the Thame Community Market.

The community day is an annual event whereby the weekly market traders generously share valuable space with local charities.

The aim of the day was to meet and chat with local people to raise awareness of oesophageal and stomach cancers, and to talk about healthy diets and exercise.

Matt and Ed spoke with dozens of people and, through donations and the sale of books and a few nice plants, they also raised nearly £100.

OOSO would like to thank all the Thame market traders for making Matt and Ed so very welcome. Special thanks go to Ed who gave up his time to help us. We also owe a big 'thank you' to Ed's employers at Canon who run a scheme allowing employees to have two days a year assisting charities such as ours.

Thame Community Market – A Day in the Life